FUNDRAISER

From the Chapter Director

Well can you believe January is gone already? At least it's a month closer to warm weather and riding season. After the cold spell and monsoons we have had we are supposed to have weather in the high 40's to mid 50's this week! I can see some riding coming!!

Thanks to all for the prayers for our Pumpkin, after 2 days in the hospital she's doing better. She's not ok yet but is doing better, she is 14 and we rescued her 12 1/2 years ago.

I want to thank Rick and Leah for a great OPP's meeting last weekend. Johnny and Sherry along with Steve Knode and myself attended. Steve was again this year ask to do a seminar on tech talk. I had to go to the C/D breakout session but hear it was great and after the last one he did it was highly requested this year. We had seminars, games, lots of good info on the coming year. We got to meet most all the new Chapter Couples and Individuals of the year.

We also got more info on this year's Ride In and KY Blast, so make your plans for May 31st & June 1st The KY Ride In at Henderson, hosted by Chapter K and the KY Blast dates of August 15th, 16th & 17th in Danville.

View From The Saddle

Who left the barn door open? Talk about cold...reminds me of when we lived in western Nebraska. We had some real cold there, though, with -20 degrees actual temperatures not uncommon this time of year. And when we lived in Montana one of my co-workers would say "There's nothing between us and the north star but a barbed wire fence."

We used a wood burning stove to heat our house in Montana on the Charles M. Russell National Wildlife Refuge. Not because we didn't have any other heat source but because the other option was the electric baseboard heaters and they were extremely expensive to operate. So we'd make it a family outing to take the pickup and a trailer down to the Missouri River bottoms and cut dead cottonwood and haul it back to the house.

I could throw in a big "all nighter" log at bedtime, get it roaring in the stove and then close the damper. The log would smolder all night giving off some heat and by morning it would be a fraction of its original size. Throw in another log, open the damper and Shazam, we'd have plenty of heat rolling off the stove. A couple of nights a winter, though, when it was around -20 or so, the downward pressure of the cold air would overcome the warm air from the stove and the house would fill with smoke! The smoke alarm would go off in the middle of the night and Jennie and I would have to open windows, set fans in the window to suck the smoke out and stuff towels under the girl's bedroom door. Great fun in our rural Montana refuge home.

So after living 2 years in Montana and two 5 year stints in North Dakota and 18 years in the Panhandle of Nebraska, Kentucky winter is just a mild inconvenience.

I recently buffed out a couple of minor scratches on the bike, as I said I'd do last month, and that all turned out nice. These weren't cuts in to the paint, just the clear coat, so my buffing compound and power buffer and the liquid ceramic coating did the job.

So it's time to start cutting firewood. One oak tree that fell recently is laying in to a crop field so that has to go first. No rest for the wicked, they say.

The Kentucky Road Riders Ops Meeting was held last weekend. That was a good chance to get caught up on what's happening at the State and National level of WingD' Riders and it was a brief cure for cabin fever.

I'm getting anxious for another 50-60 degree day without rain so I can take a little ride on the Wing. It's patiently waiting in the pole barn with Stabil in the gas tank and a Battery Tender plugged in to keep the battery charged and a full sized cover over it to keep the dust off. This is Kentucky, after all, and these below freezing temperatures won't last long. One day in the near future the sun will be out, the wind will be light and the temperature tolerable and I'll venture out on the bike again and reacquaint myself with the roads around my ol' Kentucky home.
